THE WORLD'S BEST TEACHER

A

The Canadian Maggie MacDonnell, born in 1980, won last year's Global Teacher Prize as the world's best teacher for her work in Salluit, an Inuit village in northern Quebec.

B

5 Salluit is a small village in the Canadian Arctic and you can only reach it by plane. About 1,300 people live here and in winter the temperature can fall to -25°C . And this remote settlement faces some serious social problems. When MacDonnell first arrived at her school in Salluit, she saw classrooms with broken chairs and desks, and graffiti. There were not even any books to work with. Many teachers had left the school in the middle of the year suffering from stress. The school did not have a principal either; he had left his job after only 10 six weeks. Salluit's teenagers often live in very poor conditions. MacDonnell says that the majority of her students do not even have a bedroom – they sleep on the sofa in the living room.

C

15 Maggie MacDonnell realized how serious these problems were and decided to do something about them. She has even become a temporary foster mother, giving a home to some of her own students. Maggie has already produced promising results, not only among the schoolchildren. All of Salluit's residents benefit from her work. All of this work is more than anyone can do in regular hours, and Maggie MacDonnell spends a lot of her free time on school activities. She says: "I think as a teacher in a small Arctic village your day never 20 ends. The school doors may close – but the relationship with your students continues, as you all live in the same place."

D

Ms. MacDonnell also uses her school project work to deal with local social problems. She has, for example, set up a community kitchen. The students help to prepare healthy meals which they serve to people who need them. The project teaches the students about cooking 25 and healthy eating, and also provides a useful service to the community. Together with her students, Ms. MacDonnell has also opened a fitness center. The young people helped with everything from painting to assembling equipment. Now all the village's residents can use the center. It helps to relieve stress and has important benefits for everyone with health problems. The praise the students get for this project helps to build up their self-confidence. 30 In addition Ms. MacDonnell spends a lot of time as a coach for the Salluit Running Club and in 2016 seven Inuit teenagers traveled with her to Hawaii to run a half marathon.

E

The key to her success is that she has always tried to turn students from problems into solutions. "You have to connect on a person-to-person level," she says. When asked about technology in the classroom, MacDonnell says that such products can support learning, 35 maybe, for highly motivated students with digital access. But it is completely different for students who are struggling to understand their own culture. “How can an app manage behavior? How can an unhappy student expect help from a tablet?” she says.

F

40 So Maggie MacDonnell, who has been working at her small school for seven years, won the Global Teacher Prize for changing the lives of her students and transforming her community. Three of her Inuit students went with her to Dubai, where she received the $1 million award. She was among ten finalists chosen from 20,000 nominations and applications from 179 countries. This prize, which is now in its fourth year, was set up by the Varkey Foundation to show the important role teachers play in society. The Canadian Prime Minister congratulated MacDonnell in a video message. “We are all proud of you,” he said.
